HELENA IN A BIG HOLE

ler Boomers Promise to Do What They Can't and Won't Do.

AS TO BITTER ROOT FRUIT

Magnifloent Yield of the Rich Rem-A Revelation to Many Pe plo-A Valley That Will Yet

Missocia, Oct. 5.—Each train that somes down the Bitter Root valley brings several ear loads of potators consigned to St. Paul and Minneapolis. There seems to be some hitch in the creation of the big domand in Helena, which the Last Chance becomers promised last month to mangurate. It is easy enough to be enhaustastic in the Bitter Root valley. In het, the man who falls to be impressed by the marvelous resources and beauties of the valley is a man who could not be impressed by anything short of a kick by a mule. Acting under the spell of the valley, the Helena boomers have made promises which they know they cannot halfill and not until they return to the freary environment of their own barren town do they come to a full realisation of what they have done. They have no contestion of what they are undertaking when they agree to take the entire product of the Bitter Root valley. The trouble is hat the people of Helena cannot abandon the habit of belitting the resources of this section. They have always ridiculed the staken of this valley and they have repeated their false statements so often hat they have come to believe the tales hemselves.

The Helena man who effered to pur-hase the whole apple crop of the valley, nder the impression that it amounted to 10 boxes, is a fair sample of the people f that town in their attitude toward flescula and the Bitter Root valley. of that town in their attitude toward Missoula and the Bitter Root valley. They began years ago by misrepresenting this section and have persistently ignered it ever since. During the recent firemen's convention in this city, Chief Mentrum presented some of his visiting friends with specimens of his visiting friends with specimens of these souvenirs was Chief Reece of the Helesa department. He took his fruit home with him and naturally showed it to his friends. The Independent man saw the apples and plums and was filled with amassement. His paper announced as if it was an item of startling news, that fruit can be grown in the Missoula valley. The Helesa people are just awakening to a fact that has been known to the rest of the ctate for years. During all this time the farmers of this valley have found a ready market for their produce in Butte, Anaconda and other west side towns and recently Great Falls has bought liberally. But in all this time, the Helena market has been supplied largely from outside the state, when better fruit, grain and vegetables have been offered here at the same prices. But, now that Helena begins to realise that she needs the votes of this section, she presumes to pose as a market for Missoula and Butter Root ranchman in the upper valley of the Bit-ter Root states that he sent some of his apples to Melona last month and that the returns yielded him a not price of 31 cents a hoz. Another ranchman came to this office not long ago and stated that he had tried to sell a carload of vegetable in Helena. The merchants would take them but the price was so low that he hesitated and determined to try another market and went over to Anaconda. He sold his vegetable there for $75 more than he was offered in Helena. One of the best known market gardeners in Missoula has had an agest in Anaconda ever since early spring and has made regular carload consignments to him all through the season. Others have made regular shipments to commission houses and dealers in Anaconda and every one tells the same story this fall—the market was reliable and the prices satisfactory.

At the Stevensville fruit exhibition last week Helena was represented by a delegation who made lots of noise and who held a capital meeting, during which many kind words were said of the fruit and vegetables of the valley, but their interpet stopped there. Anaconda's representation consisted of a few quiet business men who didn't talk capital, but who showed their appreciation of the valley in abowed their appreciation of the valley in a more substantial manner. Two car-loads of fruit were sold to Anaconda dealers and three were sold to Butte mer-chants, while orders for two more were hants, while orders for the booked for future delivery.

The claim that is made by Helena that she has always taken an interest in this she has always taken amusement here. valley is causing much amusement here.
All that Helena has ever taken from Missoula is the military post, and all that she will take will be the railroad shope—not fruit and grain.
